Advances in TERATOLOGY

Edited by D. H. M. Woollam
Emmanuel College
Cambridge, England

The fourth volume of ADVANCES IN TERATOLOGY is devoted to some less commonly approached aetiological factors. The traditional hypothesis of teratological possibilities due to close paternal-maternal relationships is reviewed. A detailed account of the congenital infection, rubella, as an aetiological agent impairing the growth and development of affected infants is established and compared to activity of other post-natal infections.

CONTENTS:

Morton S. Adams, Children of Related Parents. Murdina M. Desmond, Geraldine S. Wilson, Willie M. Verniaud, Joseph L. Melnick and William E. Rawls, The Early Growth and Development of Infants With Congenital Rubella. B. Memkes, S. Sandor and A. Ilies, Cell Death in Teratogenesis. Lars Jacobsen, Radiation Induced Foetal Damage: A Quantitative Analysis of Seasonal Influence and Possible Threshold Effect Following Low Dose X-Irradiation. Casimer T. Grabowski, Embryonic Oxygen Deficiency—A Physiological Approach to Analysis of Teratological Mechanisms. James B. Hanshaw, Developmental Abnormalities Associated with Congenital Cytomegalovirus Infection. Leonard R. Axelrod, Drugs and Nonhuman Primate Teratogenesis.
